

AWARD OF THE SILVER STAR

For heroism and gallantry in ground combat in the Republic of Vietnam, 13 to 25 August 1970. Lieutenant Colonel Dinky Dau GreenMan distinguished himself while serving as commanding officer of a bunch of dumbass troops during operations near Firebase Barnett. During the entire operation the GreenMan repeatedly supervised ground and air forces which got fucked up looking for a meaningless bunker complex. The GreenMan directed artillery and tactical air support against enemy hills, trees and grass. He listened on the radio repeatedly as his units were ambushed and attacked. After the enemy forces were routed, he, without regard for his personal safety, tabulated the reported dead. From the air he repeatedly urged boonierats [infantrymen] on and he engineered attacks and counterattacks for them to carry out. During the operation the GreenMan also managed to take twelve hot showers in the rear, eat thirty hot meals and read twenty-seven Fantastic Four comic books. The GreenMan's personal bravery and devotion to duty are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army.
